WHAT IS LINGUISTICS?

Linguistics is the study of language as the core of being human. Human language has a number of properties that render it unique among all known communication systems. Linguists analyse different aspects of language and language-related behaviour. By identifying commonalities and differences in the languages of the world, by analysing language structure, and by gaining insight into language acquisition and language use in society, linguists contribute to our understanding of how the mind works and of the driving forces behind cultural and wider social processes.
