ABOUT US:

The Department of Russian Studies currently employs eleven teachers, six of whom have scientific-teaching titles (three Associate Professors, one Associate Professor, two Assistant Professors), three have Assistant titles (three Teaching Assistants) and three have teaching titles (one senior foreign language instructor and two foreign language instructors).

The founding of the Department of Russian Studies dates back to October 16, 1956. It constituted the very core of the Slavic studies in Zadar. The double-major study programme of Russian Language and Literature was among the initial five study programmes at that time. However, contrary to the past deficiency of both teaching staff and students alike, Department of Russian Studies study programme of today is one of the most sought-after by Croatian high school graduates and the one with the highest increase in number of students at the University of Zadar.

Russian Language and Literature study programme is comparable to all Russian studies (and/or Slavic studies that include a study programme of Russian Language and Literature) of the neighbouring countries (Italy, Slovenia, Hungary, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia, Montenegro and N. Macedonia). It consists of two levels, (double-major) undergraduate and (both single-major and double-major) graduate. The duration of the double-major undergraduate study programme of Russian Language and Literature is 3 years (6 semesters), after which upon passing the Final exam students are awarded an academic degree of Bachelor/Bachelorette (baccalaureus/baccalaurea) of Russian Language and Literature. Both double-major graduate study programme (courses in teaching and translation) and single-major graduate programme of Russian Language and Literature last for 2 years (4 semesters). Upon completion of the Master's thesis defense students acquire an academic degree of Master of education of Russian Language and Literature (for course in teaching), or Master of Russian Language and Literature (for course in translation).

The Department has established cooperation with numerous European universities (universities of Graz, Brno, Tallinn, etc.). Annual academic exchange programme for students and teachers is carried out with our Russian partners, such as Russian State University for the Humanities from Moscow, Linguistic University of Nizhny Novgorod, Udmurt State University, etc. Another important cooperation was established with Immanuel Kant Baltic Federal University of Kaliningrad, where our students have not only been travelling to as part of the student mobility programmess, but also participating in Russian Language, Literature and Culture International Student Olympiad and returning home with diplomas and awards on a regular basis.

The Department of Russian Studies in cooperation with the Department of Croatian Language and Literature have been organizing an already traditional biannual international conference Zadar Philology Days, upon completion of which a book of proceedings is being published. Some of the Department members take part in the redaction of the University's magazine of Croatica et Slavica Iadertina and some of the others take part in international redactions and organizational committees of international scientific conferences. Teachers of the Department have authored various research and other publications.

The Department of Russian Studies is a member of the Croatian Association of the Teachers of Russian Language and Literature, a branch of Russian Association of the Teachers of Russian Language and Literature. The Department lectors are members of the Croatian Association of University Lectors. Since academic year 2008. our students have organized a project Russian Days. The aim of this annual student project, which hosted numerous workshops and lectures from distinguished experts and students, is the promotion of Russian language, history and culture. Another project entitled Zadar Rusistics in form of a web portal is dedicated to the popularization of the Russian culture in Croatian language and of the Croatian culture in Russian. Since recently (2019.) our students have participated in the international Russian educational project, named Comprehensive dictation – Foreigners' Test »TruD«, which is based upon a text of one of the contemporary Russian writers and which is taken by the Russians, the Russian language speakers, Russianists and Russian culture enthusiasts all over the world at the same day and hour.
