COURSES OFFERED IN A FOREIGN LANGUAGE IN THE ACADEMIC YEAR 2021/2022

Title of the course Name of the teacher	Department	Department of English
Name of the teacher Number of ECTS credits The courses will be organized as	Courses offered in a foreign language in the academic year 2021/2022
Name of the teacher Number of ECTS credits The courses will be organized as Description of the course The main objective of the course is to introduce students to the basic concepts and theoretical and methodological frameworks which are present and used in research on language policy and planning. Within such frameworks language is not analyzed solely as a form of human behaviour, but, primarily as an object of such behaviour. Thus, the course objectives refer to the development of students' critical thinking about relevant theoretical frameworks and methodological procedures, but also about a number of areas of human activities within which different language policies and planning processes are manifested. Issues related to research on language policy and planning include the following: nationality, nationalism, national languages, official languages, status of minority communities and their languages, as well as endangered languages. Special attention is paid to contextualizing the identified aspects within globalization processes. In addition, course objectives include the development of students' critical thinking about issues related to research on any planning in the educational context, the media, and other public and private spaces. Case studies that illustrate a certain issue are diverse, but primarily have to do with the analysis of language policies and planning in multilingual, Anglophone-dominant contexts. This enables a clearer understanding of language as an object of human behaviour from all relevant aspects of both the ways in which a particular community functions and from the broader perspective. Considering the identified objectives and the structure of the course, one of the requirements that students have to fulfil is writing a seminar paper on a topic related to an aspect of language policy and planning. The objective of the seminar papers, as well as individual elaboration of an issue through critical thinking and application of the scientific framework. Learning outcomes	Title of the course	Language policy and Planning
Number of ECTS credits The courses will be organized as Description of the course The main objective of the course is to introduce students to the basic concepts and theoretical and methodological frameworks which are present and used in research on language policy and planning. Within such frameworks language is not analyzed solely as a form of human behaviour, but, primarily as an object of such behaviour. Thus, the course objectives refer to the development of students' critical thinking about relevant theoretical frameworks and methodological procedures, but also about a number of areas of human activities within which different language policies and planning processes are manifested. Issues related to research on language policy and planning include the following: nationality, nationalism, national languages, official languages, status of minority communities and their languages, as well as endangered languages. Special attention is paid to contextualizing the identified aspects within globalization processes. In addition, course objectives include the development of students' critical thinking about issues related to language policy and planning in the educational context, the media, and other public and private spaces. Case studies that illustrate a certain issue are diverse, but primarily have to do with the analysis of language policies and planning in multilingual, Anglophone-dominant contexts. This enables a clearer understanding of language as an object of human behaviour from all relevant aspects of both the ways in which a particular community functions and from the broader perspective. Considering the identified objectives and the structure of the course, one of the requirements that students have to fulfil is writing a seminar paper on a topic related to an aspect of language policy and planning. The objective of the seminar paper is the acquisition and practice of skills required to write seminar papers, as well as individual elaboration of an issue through critical thinking and applicatio	Name of the	V	V
The courses will be organized as Description of the course Seminars Exercises Seminars Exercises Seminars Seminars Exercises Seminars	teacher
The courses will be organized as Description of the course Description of the c	Number of ECTS	4	Sam	aatar	Mautumn/winten
Description of the course The main objective of the course is to introduce students to the basic concepts and theoretical and methodological frameworks which are present and used in research on language policy and planning. Within such frameworks language is not analyzed solely as a form of human behaviour, but, primarily as an object of such behaviour. Thus, the course objectives refer to the development of students' critical thinking about relevant theoretical frameworks and methodological procedures, but also about a number of areas of human activities within which different language policies and planning processes are manifested. Issues related to research on language policy and planning include the following: nationality, nationalism, national languages, official languages, status of minority communities and their languages, as well as endangered languages. Special attention is paid to contextualizing the identified aspects within globalization processes. In addition, course objectives include the development of students' critical thinking about issues related to language policy and planning in the educational context, the media, and other public and private spaces. Case studies that illustrate a certain issue are diverse, but primarily have to do with the analysis of language policies and planning in multilingual, Anglophone-dominant contexts. This enables a clearer understanding of language as an object of human behaviour from all relevant aspects of both the ways in which a particular community functions and from the broader perspective. Considering the identified objectives and the structure of the course, one of the requirements that students have to fulfil is writing a seminar paper on a topic related to an aspect of language policy and planning. The objective of the seminar paper is the acquisition and practice of skills required to write seminar papers, as well as individual elaboration of an issue through critical thinking and application of the scientific framework.	credits		Sem	estei		□ spring/summer
Description of the course The main objective of the course is to introduce students to the basic concepts and theoretical and methodological frameworks which are present and used in research on language policy and planning. Within such frameworks language is not analyzed solely as a form of human behaviour, but, primarily as an object of such behaviour. Thus, the course objectives refer to the development of students' critical thinking about relevant theoretical frameworks and methodological procedures, but also about a number of areas of human activities within which different language policies and planning processes are manifested. Issues related to research on language policy and planning include the following: nationality, nationalism, national languages, official languages, status of minority communities and their languages, as well as endangered languages. Special attention is paid to contextualizing the identified aspects within globalization processes. In addition, course objectives include the development of students' critical thinking about issues related to language policy and planning in the educational context, the media, and other public and private spaces. Case studies that illustrate a certain issue are diverse, but primarily have to do with the analysis of language policies and planning in multilingual, Anglophone-dominant contexts. This enables a clearer understanding of language as an object of human behaviour from all relevant aspects of both the ways in which a particular community functions and from the broader perspective. Considering the identified objectives and the structure of the course, one of the requirements that students have to fulfil is writing a seminar paper on a topic related to an aspect of language policy and planning. The objective of the seminar paper is the acquisition and practice of skills required to write seminar papers, as well as individual elaboration of an issue through critical thinking and application of the scientific framework. Learning outcomes		Lectures		Semina	rs	Exercises
course concepts and theoretical and methodological frameworks which are present and used in research on language policy and planning. Within such frameworks language is not analyzed solely as a form of human behaviour, but, primarily as an object of such behaviour. Thus, the course objectives refer to the development of students' critical thinking about relevant theoretical frameworks and methodological procedures, but also about a number of areas of human activities within which different language policies and planning processes are manifested. Issues related to research on language policy and planning include the following: nationality, nationalism, national languages, official languages, status of minority communities and their languages, as well as endangered languages. Special attention is paid to contextualizing the identified aspects within globalization processes. In addition, course objectives include the development of students' critical thinking about issues related to language policy and planning in the educational context, the media, and other public and private spaces. Case studies that illustrate a certain issue are diverse, but primarily have to do with the analysis of language policies and planning in multilingual, Anglophone-dominant contexts. This enables a clearer understanding of language as an object of human behaviour from all relevant aspects of both the ways in which a particular community functions and from the broader perspective. Considering the identified objectives and the structure of the course, one of the requirements that students have to fulfil is writing a seminar paper on a topic related to an aspect of language policy and planning. The objective of the seminar paper is the acquisition and practice of skills required to write seminar papers, as well as individual elaboration of an issue through critical thinking and application of the scientific framework. Learning outcomes	be organized as	\boxtimes yes \square no)	\boxtimes yes	□ no	\square yes \boxtimes no of the course language policy and planning, and will be able to:	Learning outcomes	Example 2 yes □ no □ yes □
tor the course tranguage poincy and praining, and will be able to.	_	•
-define and distinguish between basic concepts in language policy and	of the course planning

COURSES OFFERED IN A FOREIGN LANGUAGE IN THE ACADEMIC YEAR 2021/2022

	-analyze the place occupied by research into language policy and planning within the broader sociolinguistic framework
	- compare and analyze the relevant theoretical frameworks and methodological procedures used in research on language policy and planning
	- distinguish between major areas of social organization and activity within which it is possible to analyze the establishment and development of language policies (citizenship, educational context, the media, etc.)
	- critically think about the basic factors that lead to changes in status that languages have in a given sociocultural context (in standardization processes, status planning of minority and endangered languages, etc.)
	- apply the acquired knowledge on the analysis of different examples of language policies and planning processes, primarily in markedly multilingual and multicultural, Anglophone-dominant contexts
	- critically discuss the ideological aspects that may be identified within T1 :-	the analyses of language policies and planni	ng
The course is	Incoming students who choose the above	⊠ yes	\square no offered to	department as a home department	-
	All the incoming students regardless of the	\square yes	⊠ no chosen home department at UNIZD UNIZD students enrolled at the above	⊠ yes	\square no department as an elective course
	All UNIZD students as an elective course	□ yes	⊠ no
The course will be	No
offered for	Only if the frontal (live) teaching will not be	\boxtimes distance learning (virtual mobility)	Together with the frontal (live) teaching	th the frontal (live) teaching

The form should be filled out in English and/or other languages in which the courses are offered in